

JKM Home Poised to Inspire With New Architecturally-Inspired Designs

At 2019 fall market, the JKM Home Collection debuts eight new pieces into their expanding signature case good line. Expertly designed by J. Kent Martin, these new pieces draw inspiration from classic architecture and are meant to be versatile in their placement; whether that is alongside a cherished antique or a piece with modern appeal is up for interpretation.

Adding to JKM Home's carefully crafted details are the steel accents featured in several of the pieces debuting this fall. The steel and wood elements results in subtle contrast which gives each new piece an undeniable presence in the collection. "Details are what I love most about designing furniture. Paying respect to those small elements of design is what delineates something truly beautiful from something ordinary", says Martin. "Careful consideration went into adding steel to accentuate my designs without distracting from them. Each piece is a lesson in controlled design."

Also of note are the Luxurious materials and finishes are used throughout the expansive yet cohesive line. Exotic wood veneers, shagreen, hand woven raffia, and glass remain staple features in the JKM Home portfolio. It's impossible not to notice the application of these fine finishes, making each piece as alluring as the next.

New pieces Edmund, Dillon, and Brookes are reimagined versions of best sellers in the line, now available in different finishes – expanding their appeal and making them a designer's dream to place in a space.

Available to the trade, the JKM Home Collection shows exclusively at CR Laine during the fall 2019 High Point Market, the largest furnishings industry trade show in the world.
