Nathan Anthony Debuts Upholstery Collection for October

Creative Director Tina Nicole reflects on the spherical evolution

LOS ANGELES – Custom upholstery resource Nathan Anthony Furniture debuts the Alais collection of upholstered furnishings in the company's permanent showroom in InterHall, space IH-602, during Fall High Point Market, Oct. 16-20.

Nathan Anthony Creative Director and lead designer Tina Nicole introduces Alais this fall with three signature items: a fully upholstered bed, an accent chair and a bench, each distinguished by curvaceous shapes and the addition of ball-shaped feet, crafted from hardwood and sized to scale.

A distinctive design element in the collection, Nicole says incorporating the sphere is the next phase of the current curvy furniture trend.

“There’s been a definite evolution in our designs over several seasons,” says Nicole. “We started by rounding out accent chair frames several years ago for styles like Elan and Dali, and then more dramatically for our popular Buttercup chair. We also began to shape the foam padding surrounding the frames, which added soft dimensionality and plushness, as well as visual interest, to our Chablis and Chelle styles.”

“From there, we really pushed the envelope by shaping larger wood frames with no angles to create the Embrace collection, which was launched in early 2020 and features our best selling sofa,” she adds. “Rounder shapes are more inviting, like getting a hug, and our interior designer clients have really responded to that.”

The Alais collection is additionally distinguished by Nicole’s fabric cover selection for the fall showroom presentation. Sourced from Fishman Fabrics in Chicago, LeCosta is a high end wool boucle produced in Italy from pure wool and cotton. Available in 8 colorways, the base material is flecked with colorful, confetti-like yarns.

“I love the quality of the material,” says Nicole. “It’s luxe, but it’s also very fun and the overall showroom design will reflect that vibe. We want to bring a dose of ‘happy’ to High Point Market in October.”

For the benchmade upholstery specialist, all items in the collection are fully customizable, along with the option for C.O.M. The ball feet are available in 11 wood finishes, including the newest addition called ‘Blondey’.
