

MORY Returns to High Point Market for Fall 2026

Seattle furniture brand brings its adaptable solid-wood collection to 313 Space

HIGH POINT, N.C. — Fall 2026 — Seattle-based furniture company MORY returns to High Point Market this fall, exhibiting at 313 Space, Booth M12, Floor 2, with a collection of thoughtfully designed furniture and lighting made for the way spaces — and lives — evolve.

Following its High Point debut this past spring, MORY returns with its growing collection of modular, adaptable furniture, including Shore™ modular storage, Mesa™ tables, Camber™ shelving and room dividers, and Kasmo™ hand-blown glass lighting.

MORY designs around a simple idea: well-made furniture should endure — adapting to new spaces, new chapters and evolving tastes. Rather than designing pieces for a single room, MORY uses a considered kit-of-parts approach that allows furniture to adapt, reconfigure and evolve over time.

Designed and fabricated in Seattle, the collection pairs solid wood, considered detailing and straightforward construction with a warm, quietly modern aesthetic. The result is furniture intended to work equally well in residential, hospitality and commercial environments.

For designers, architects and trade professionals, MORY offers a direct relationship with its Seattle team, with no minimum order requirements and a 8–10 week lead times.

This fall also marks a new High Point home for MORY. The company will exhibit at 313 Space, a curated destination bringing together more than 70 designers, makers and brands inside a restored century-old mill.

Visitors will be able to experience MORY's materials, construction and adaptability firsthand and explore how the collection can be specified for projects ranging from individual residential spaces to larger commercial applications.
