

Modern Matter Announces Collection of Hardware with Schumacher

Modern Matter is proud to announce its brand-new collaboration with the venerable American design house Schumacher. The collection marks Schumacher's first foray into hardware and also signals a category expansion for Modern Matter, introducing architectural drapery and cabinet hardware ranging from curtain rods, finials, and end caps to knobs, backplates, and pulls.

Crafted from solid brass, the products are presented in a refined palette of finishes: burnished brass, unlacquered brass, polished brass, and a newly introduced antique nickel developed exclusively for the collaboration. The cabinet hardware assortment includes knobs, backplates, bar pulls, and appliance pulls, with select designs incorporating Lucite and natural wood accents in ebony and acacia. The drapery hardware includes curtain rods, finials, and end caps designed to function as architectural statements. Inspired by the sculptural forms and bold restraint of famed American silversmith and jeweler William Spratling, the collection is defined by strong architectural profiles and a weighty, tactile presence—refined, intentional, and deeply grounded in craftsmanship.

Both Modern Matter and Schumacher share a deep commitment to design excellence, craft, and enduring style. With this collaboration, the brands are offering a holistic option for designers to coordinate the new curtain and cabinet hardware with Schumacher's iconic fabrics and wallcoverings, creating layered, intentional interiors.

"As a creative company, we've long been inspired by Schumacher's history and design legacy," says Kat Litton, Modern Matter's Chief Creative Officer. "Their work is timeless and classic, yet continually evolving with fresh, inspiring ideas, making this collaboration a natural fit."

"Our new partnership with Modern Matter has been a dream, not only because the company's dedication to beauty and craftsmanship aligns so well with Schumacher's, but also because they understood what we were after in creating a collection that feels classic but of-the-moment all at once," adds Schumacher Creative Director Dara Caponigro. "They embraced our ideas and helped bring them to life with a refined and artistic approach."

The collection launches September 30, 2026, and will be available at modern-matter.com and schumacher.com. The collection will also be available in Schumacher showrooms.

###

About Modern Matter

Dedicated to understated glamour and high quality, Modern Matter creates artisan-inspired cabinet, bathroom, and curtain hardware that is as elegant as it is durable, often collaborating with leading brands to develop exclusive products for design-savvy homeowners. Hand-crafted from solid brass and accented with luxurious materials, Modern Matter's unique proprietary designs are redefining hardware as we know it today. Learn more at modern-matter.com and @modernmatterhardware.

About Schumacher

Founded in 1889 in New York by Parisian Frederic Schumacher, the company has been synonymous with style ever since. Still family-owned, Schumacher continues to uphold its namesake's insatiable passion for beauty, thirst for quality, and quest for innovation. From fabrics, wallcoverings, and trim to furniture, rugs, and pillows, each of Schumacher's wide-ranging collections is united by a respect for classicism and an eye for the cutting edge. Presently, Schumacher has 23 showrooms in the United States in addition to locations in London, Paris, and Milan. It is part of a growing stable of design companies in the portfolio of its parent company, FS&CO, which also includes Patterson Flynn, Backdrop, Tillett Textiles, and Frederic Media. Learn more about Schumacher at schumacher.com and @schumacher1889.

Press Contact:

Nicole Nicholson, nicole@blitzerandcompany.com